

Observing Ethics in Universities and Higher Education Centers: An alternative for improving behaviors

H. Arasteh*¹
H. Jahed

Abstract

Professional ethic is related to behavior, curtsy and practice of an individual during performing professional work. This could be advising, research, teaching, writing or every other work. Every organizational collection has scientific and behavioral codes with ordinary professional structure for its members that should be observed. Professional ethic is sum of principles and standards of human behavior that determines groups and individuals' behavior. Principles of professional ethic have transcendental values that play important role in respect to norms and effectiveness of social interactions, and this required primary and basic recognition of those principles. In this article, in addition to reviewing concepts, necessity and importance, development and methods of applying professional ethic in organizations, ethics in higher education in four dimensions of administration, teaching, research and students are examined.

Keywords: Ethic, Professional Ethics, Management, Higher Education.

* Corresponding Author, Associate Professor

1. College of Education and Psychology, Tarbiat Moallem University, Tehran, Tel/Fax: (+9821)22467480
Email:Arasteh@tmu.ac.ir